Swami Vivekanand Seva Trust (SVST) – A brief

SVST is a non-political, non-religious and development oriented grass root level organization. The thrust area of working has been to work for creating self employment avenues for the unemployed and income generation by the poor for self reliance. Scientific management of enterprises and income generation activities in the rural areas had been the main hurdle for coming up for a sustainable economic growth. Emphasis of the organization had been to address the problem through dissemination of scientific production procedures and management and identified the key economic activities prevalent in its operational areas to make them more income generating for professional entrepreneurship. Keeping in view to success the same the organization formed to be played role as facilitator in the year 2009 – 10.

The NGO believes that integration is one of the key words of development approach; the experience and knowledge of the past decade have convinced the organization about the importance of interdependence and integration. To better understand the rationale and the importance of this close “integration” in the process of community development, it is important to keep in mind SVST’s rules of development, as these rules are the outcome of an in-depth reflection on our work. “Action Reflections Action” well explains our concept of “integration”. A drinking water well, watershed management, Farmers groups, Women groups, various development committees, the mobilization of the youth as agents of change in their communities, collectively trigger and provide a fertile ground for a new mindset that will nourish the villagers’ motivation for a development that is rooted within the community itself. We are convinced that sustainable community development is only possible if and when all elements such as economic, social, political, environmental and cultural are brought together and systematically “integrated”. Community development is feasible only if all segments of the society are mobilized: weaker women, widows who are not treated equally, marginal farmers, jobless youth, poor children who do not receive any education. The outcome of SVST’s community development, implementing the principle of integration, has not been achieved in isolation. It has been developed through the support and contribution of many people of the society: those who were part of SVST in the past and those of the present, in this quest for human solidarity and sharing: members of the committee, donors, volunteers, workers and well wishers.

SVST has been operating on this cusp and has played a confident role in helping both the government and the voluntary sector understand each other. Even though this often resembles walking a tight rope, this balancing act is crucial to building effective partnerships. In doing so SVST has also raised expectations for itself from both sides. The initiatives that SVST has taken on have been mostly in line with meeting these expectations and playing the support role for partnerships. In playing the support role one crucial aspect is building the capacity of voluntary agencies as its core functions. Since SVST started working on this issue and despite some interesting initiatives and programs over the past year; we are still some time away from the dream of a significant number of effective voluntary agencies collaborating with the government on important issues of human development. Both in terms of numbers of organizations with competence and the environment for collaboration, which are the two issues on which SVST has planned its interventions, the task is still immense.

SVST Vision

We long for a just and peaceful society in which each individual and each community is empowered and self-reliant; where human dignity, equal rights and equal opportunities are enjoyed by all and after which we may feel proud being Indian as Ideal country citizen.
